Today some lucky Vietnam Veteran will be selected to represent the Kentucky Air National Guard during the day-long observance of the National Salute to Vietnam Veterans.

The activity will take place Nov. 13 in Washington, D.C. The Guard member will participate in the Tribute to Veterans Parade, which will feature large formations of Vietnam veterans marching by state, bands, floats, active duty military units and groups of veterans from other wars. It will last from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Other activities are scheduled, too.

Commanders gathered the names of people who would be interested in attending the event. Brig Gen Carl D. Black, wing commander, will conduct the drawing. The winner will get a free round-trip airline ticket. (Continued on page 9)

GUARD GETS NEW CHIEF OF STAFF: State Adjutant General Billy G. Wellman has named Brig. Gen. Fred F. Bradley as the new chief of staff of the Kentucky Air National Guard.

The 29-year veteran took on his new duties November 1. He replaces Brig. Gen. William P. Gast, who retired in October. (Continued on p.2)

AIRCRAFT RETIRED, ERA ENDS

Tyndall AFB, Fla. (AFNS) -- The F-101 Voodoo Era in Air Force History has come to an end with Tyndall retiring the last Air Force active-duty Voodoo Aircraft. The F-101, an all-weather fighter-interceptor aircraft, was developed in 1946 originally as a penetration fighter for bomber escort. But after introduction of the B-52 Strato-fortress, it was found the fighter escort was not needed. (Continued on p.2)

18,000 Thoughtless People Miss Thanksgiving

How could anyone be so thoughtless to miss Thanksgiving day with family and friends? How could anyone be so inconsiderate of the feelings of their loved ones?

The 18,000 people are those who would not have died in traffic accidents during the past year if they had just been using their seatbelts. And another 1,000 will die needlessly this coming Thanksgiving weekend on their way to or from their Thanksgiving dinner.

You don't want to wear your seatbelt? Too confining; too much trouble; you just don't believe the statistics; you're such a good driver that you won't have an accident? Consider the fact that 1/2 of those deaths were caused by drunk drivers (one out of ten drivers on the road between 7:00 PM and 3:00 AM is legally drunk.) The folks that died said that it couldn't happen to them either.

Don't wear your seatbelt. The odds are in your favor. You probably won't feel a thing when it happens. Your family and friends will get over it eventually. It just hurts them a little more over the holidays. It's the thought that counts.

Bradley has served in the Kentucky Guard since 1956. Previous assignments include pilot reconnaissance officer, flight commander and squadron commander.

Bradley commanded the 123d Tactical Reconnaissance Wing from 1974 to 1981, after serving as wing director of operations and vice commander. His most recent job was deputy chief of staff at the state headquarters.

In civilian life Bradley is an attorney and farmer near Frankfort. He was elected in 1981 to the Kentucky State Senate.

The Voodoo was redesigned to meet both tactical and air defense needs including recon. The 123d TRW flew the R-model from 1965 to 1976. It was first supersonic photo reconnaissance aircraft, with speed over 1,000 mph. Six cameras, all operated by the pilot, could be mounted in compartments in the nose. From 45,000 feet the Voodoo could photo an area 217 miles long and eight miles wide, or an area of 20,000 square miles.

Originally scheduled for the aircraft "boneyard" at the military aircraft storage and disposition center, Davis-Monthan AFB, Ariz. most of the aircraft instead ended up at Duke Field, Fla., for use as targets. Two went to Hill AFB, Utah, as training aids for battle-damage repair teams, and three were flown to Aberdeen Proving Grounds, MD, for army explosive testing. Tyndall delivered the last of its 19 Voodoo aircraft to Calloway City near Tyndall, where it will be put on permanent display. At Tyndall, the F-101's were used primarily as manned targets and as "tractors" for low-cost cow targets during interceptor training missions.

BE ALERT TO TAMPERING: Is the advice the Food and Drug Administration is giving as the best protection against contaminated over-the-counter drug products. The FDA says consumers should look for signs of tampering such as broken seals and abnormal colors, smells, tastes, textures, etc. Suspected tampering should be reported to a pharmacist, doctor or retailer from whom the drug was purchased. Until tamper-resistant packaging barriers are commonplace, being alert and observant is the best self-protection, FDA officials warned. (AFNS)

A TIME TO REMEMBER

WASHINGTON (AFNS) Service men and women of all the nation's wars are honored on Veterans Day each Nov. 11. It is a time for every citizen, military and civilian, to remember those who served in America's Armed Forces. Bowed heads and humble gratitude honor the memory of those --- known and unknown--- who fought and died for our country. Honor also belongs to those who served so bravely, providing the support so essential for continued defense of our nation and ideals. America's veterans have created a proud record of sacrifice and devotion to duty. We resolve, by offering our very best, to continue in that noble tradition.

Verne Orr
Secretary of the Air Force

WASHINGTON (AFNS) "On Veterans Day, America remembers those whose dedication and determination have helped to keep our nation free. Generations of citizen soldiers, from colonial times to the present, have answered the call when our nation needed them -- in peace and in war. Our nation is thankful for the countless sacrifices and the many heroic actions of its sons and daughters in military service. With great pride in the memory of such sacrifices, we -- the men and women today's Air Force -- rededicate our efforts to keep America strong and to preserve our liberty as a free people."

Gen. Charles A. Gabriel
AF Chief of Staff

HOSPITAL MEMBERS ATTEND NATIONAL MEETING: Eight 123d Tac Hospital members recently represented the unit during the 89th Annual Meeting of the Association of Military Surgeons. The AMSIS conclude addressed Federal Health Challenges: Promotion, Prevention, and Preparedness. Persons attending the four day event included Doctors John Karibo, Sam Cooper, John Kuhn, J.D. Moore and Robert McDonald, Major Verne Fairchild, Captain Sherra Rogers and CMSgt Jack Finck. For the first time the AMSUS sponsored a chief nurses meeting as part of the convention. Lt Col Aussen, nurse coordinator on the staff of the Air Surgeon chaired the session. Following the meeting Maj Fairchild was appointed to the Creditation Committee for Guard Nurses.

The tribute will include the activities of the "River Rats," an organization of fighter pilots who served in southeast Asia; and a profile of families who still consider their sons, brothers, and fathers missing in action in southeast Asia.

Other highlights include a visit of the Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders to military installations in South Korea; a historical summary of women in uniform, focusing on their contributions in World War II; and a profile of Douglas Monroe, a coast guardsman who received the medal of honor for combat action at Guadalcanal.

There are also segments on the efforts of the former crew of the USS Tarzney to rescue the World War II destroyer, and Sgt. George Baker, the cartoonist who made the "Sgt. Sack" character famous.

"A CLOSER LOOK"

Mobility exercises are quite an experience. Our "war games" this weekend are revealing both our strengths and weaknesses. They are designed to expose our real state of readiness.

"Readiness"--it's quite a big task, isn't it? It doesn't matter whether it's taking a final exam or preparing for all-out war. The same principles apply, i.e., you're either ready or you're not. And that can either be comforting or frightening.

"Readiness is a state of mind" is a common slogan you hear and see in the armed forces.

"To fail to plan is to plan to fail" is another adage often encountered.

Yet, most of us are usually guilty of procrastinating to a certain degree. We know that we need to do it now, but...

So, we put it off, and put it off, and suddenly the "midnight hour" strikes and finds us unprepared. We beg for second chances and special mercy and promise to do better next time.

But what if there is no "next time?"

Quite often when I'm ministering with a family in their time of grief, I hear the phrase, "If only I had done this or that." This sad statement reveals a heavy load of guilt and regret.

What a shame it is that so many of us live and die and have never lived at all. We live mediocre and mundane lives frantically trying to grasp some illusive dream. Our quest for the "good life, rich and good in every way" leads us down a prim-rose path that ultimately ends up at the corner of Hopelessness and Despair.

This journey also includes denying the fact that one day we're going to come face-to-face with 'ole man Death. Our appointment with him is one we most certainly will keep. Therefore, my question is: "Will you be ready when he calls?"

Now-a-days it's vogue to deny and ignore the reality and universality of death. We're living in an era called "The Pornography of Death." Dying is a bad word and something that always happens to the 'other guy.'

Let me say it one more time: YOU ARE GOING TO DIE. WILL YOU BE READY?

God's Word is clear when it reveals that "God is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come unto repentance." This shows that God wants each of us to be ready. And He has made provisions for our preparation.

He has given us His Son Jesus Christ.

Jesus himself said, "I am the resurrection and the life; he who believes in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; And whosoever believes in me shall never die..."

Are you ready to meet the Master? Don't put it off. The Great ORI is coming. Why not invite Him into your heart right now? May God bless you as you do.

JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF COMPLETE MOBEX

Reservists and National Guard members joined active duty military over the past two weeks in exercise Proud Saber '83, a command-post exercise sponsored by the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The exercise, a follow-on to exercises Nifty Nugget '79 and Proud Spirit '80, ran Oct. 25 through Nov. 5. It was designed to test the plans, systems and procedures of the military services and the JCS for mobilization and deployment, a Department of Defense spokesman said.

Proud Saber '83 exercised procedures used to expand the active components by simulating the mobilization of all individual reservists and the logistic, communications, medical and industrial resources to support that effort, the spokesman noted. Federal civil departments and agencies having significant roles in the mobilization process also examined their procedures to support military mobilization requirements while satisfying the emergency needs of the civil sector.

Exercises such as Proud Saber are particularly beneficial, since they reveal shortfalls and procedural difficulties that can be corrected to improve the mobilization process, he added.

CIVIL ENGINEERING UPDATE:

Construction projects currently under way include repair of the broken steam line at the rear of the O&T building, and re-roofing of the fire station, motor pool, rocket storage building, and a paint storage building. Replacement of the parking apron drain is scheduled to begin on November 15, 1982. Projects currently under design include a new building for the Weapons Security Support Flight and a fire suppression and alarm system for the entire base. Designs should be finalized by late December.

NEW STUDENT FLIGHT ESTABLISHED: An effort to enhance control of persons who are listed as a deployable resource but who lack sufficient training has been launched with the establishment of the 8133d Student Flight. The student flight is organizationally aligned under the 123d Combat Support Squadron Commander, Lt. Col. Neil R. Woodcock.

In the past, the National Guard Bureau (NGB) unsuccessfully attempted to identify and track personnel in a trainee status. The new Student Flights will identify members that have yet to complete certain minimum training/training qualifications (B-skill level for enlisted; completion commissioning course for non-flying officers; and completion of advanced flying training, survival training, and local orientation flying for rated officers.) Individuals will now appear as projected assignments on the various Manning documents. They will drill with their respective units but command and administrative matters will be handled via the Student Flight. Once they satisfy the minimum requirements, each will be immediately transferred to their duty station.

A TAC PLAQUE ATTACK - PART II, by Capt(Dr.) Douglas D. Durbin: "There is just one more oral TIME BOMB to keep defused for happy gums and teeth"...

We left our dental patient satisfied last appointment that he had defused ONE time bomb, his decaying tooth, by having all cavities filled early, eliminating acid causing sweets, and use of fluoride toothpastes. He wondered why there was still a serious threat to his oral health.

Periodontitis, or gum disease, is still the number one cause of tooth loss over the age of fifty-five, but it begins when one is less than twenty. Periodontitis is NOT something you can catch or contract. Periodontitis is NOT inheritable. Periodontitis is NOT irreversible or terminal. Periodontitis IS the inflammation and destruction of the gum and bone tissue supporting the teeth. Periodontitis is painless, but devastates the entire dentition. Periodontitis is an unnecessary and controllable disease entity. Its presence is unrelated to dental caries (cavities), but both may co-exist.

The disease process begins at an early age when bacteria builds up on the teeth and produces toxic substances to the surrounding gum and bone tissue. It is precisely these acid-like toxins that cause the inflammation and ultimate "melting" of the bony support of the teeth. This can and does occur in everyone's mouth where the destructive bacteria is not kept under control.

Our dental patient, now WIDE-EYED at the horrible thought of losing his teeth, adeptly inquired what to do to keep his teeth healthy and functional for a lifetime. (Smart patient).

The answer is actually quite simple, (it's the disease process that gets complicated). If the bacterial plaque build-up never gets an opportunity to be on the tooth very long, the acid-like toxins produced cannot damage the gum and bone. This is accomplished through the proper use of dental floss and toothbrush scrubbing. This easy cleaning process, if practiced thoroughly at least once each day can result in happy gums and teeth for a lifetime.

Our patient, now quite well versed on his oral health, departed our dental clinic prepared to fight his war on dental disease. As he left, an immortal phrase was passed on to him: "Ignore your teeth, and they'll go away."

GUARD GETS GOOD PRESS: The Kentucky Air National Guard is getting into the spotlight around the commonwealth.

A photographer with the Elizabethtown News-Enterprise snapped three RF-4Cs September 24 as they flew over the Golden Armor Festival in Radcliff. The photo appeared on the front page of the September 27 issue.

The Cumberland County News featured the Guard on the front page of its October 7 edition. An Air Force photo and a story by Maj. Ed Tonini, the 123d TRW, Public Affairs Officer, highlighted the October 9 flyby of four Guard aircraft at the Burkesville Oil Festival.

If your local newspaper features stories or photos of KyANG activities or personnel, please drop a copy off at the wing PAO.

VISIT FROM DOWN UNDER: The 123d Civil Engineers received a visit this past week from Commander Kelly of the Royal Australian Air Force. The purpose of his visit was to get a first-hand look at the BAK-12 and BAK-14 aircraft arresting systems. Parts availability and dependability were the primary concerns. According to LTC Seiber, CE commander, "the 123d TRW was the first unit in the United States to install the BAK-14 and to date the system has been very effective."

ENLISTED ASSOCIATION NEWS: The EANGKy held its 10th annual conference at the Holiday Inn North, Lexington October 22-23, 1982. Guest speakers included CSM James Garritson, president EANGUS, MG Billy G. Wellman, TAG, CMS Lynn Alexander, senior enlisted advisor NGB, and LTC Donald Waldner, president NGAky.

The business session on Saturday ran from 0900 till 1530 and included the speakers, committee reports, awards, area caucuses, a memorial service for guardsmen who died in the past year and a general election of officers for the 1982-83 year.

AIR GUARD WOMAN MAKES HISTORY:

A new addition to the Kentucky Air National Guard's officer ranks made a little bit of history when she was commissioned October 21.

Second Lieutenant Shirley A. Rudolph became the Kentucky Guard's first black woman officer.

Rudolph isn't awed by her unique position. "I never thought about it until someone mentioned it," she said.

The Pennsylvania native received her commission after completing the Academy of Military Science at McGhee-Tyson AFB in Knoxville, Tenn. She was the only black woman in her class of 73 officer candidates.

"They really expected a lot," she said of the school. "If you can't do something, by God, you learned how."

To qualify for a commission, Rudolph in 1981 earned a bachelors degree in nursing from Spalding College in Louisville. She then took the Air Force Officers Qualification Test and went through an interview, competing with several other people for the single officer slot.

Before her 7-year-old son, Imani, pinned the gold bars on his mother's uniform Rudolph was a technical sergeant in the 123d Tactical Reconnaissance Wing's Social Actions office. She'll now take on the duties of assistant chief there.

Switching from non-commissioned officer to commissioned rank hasn't been too hard, Rudolph noted.

"The hardest thing has been trying not to think like a sergeant," she said. "I keep thinking I should do all these things I really don't have to do now."

She did make sure to have all her uniform brass polished up for this weekend, "but then they told us to wear fatigues!"

Rudolph admits that her enlisted friends do expect more of her now, but not more than they'd expect from other second lieutenants.

"People have had a good attitude about it (her commission)," she continued. "I'm doing things slowly, not being overbearing."

"I wish I had a real tough top sergeant to help me out."

One thing Rudolph said she'd like to do is to set up a day care center for drill weekends. "There are a lot of single parents who could use the help," she said. "Many married parents might also use the service."

The recent changes in Rudolph's life aren't limited to her blue-suitter weekends. In her civilian time the registered nurse and a friend are starting their own business.

"It's a boarding house for senior citizens," she explained. "It's for people who can't live alone, but don't need a nursing home."

Although the home's official opening isn't until Saturday, the women have already had their first customer--a disabled man who stayed with them while his wife recovered from a heart attack.

Rudolph also works for the elderly in home-care service. (Continued on page 10)

WARNING AND NOTIFICATION: Attack Warning- A 3 to 5 minute wavering tone on base and local sirens. In the event whistles, horns or other devices are used instead of the sirens, a series of short blasts for the same period could be used. This signal means take immediate shelter or other protective action. The signal may be repeated as often as necessary to make sure that the entire base population responds.

Alert signal- A 3 to 5 minute steady tone on sirens or other warnings devices. This signal alerts personnel of near peacetime emergencies, i.e. tornadoes, flash floods, seismic sea waves (Not applicable in Louisville, Ha!). Personnel can then monitor radio, TV, base PA, or sound trucks for additional instructions or information.

CONTRIBUTIONS NEEDED: Canned goods and contributions are now being accepted to "Dare to Care", a locally-operated service organization in Louisville. The collection will continue until the middle of December.

The emphasis is being promoted by Chaplain Tommy Smith. This is an annual event and has received good response in the past several years.

"Your participation in these ways will help needy families in the Louisville area to have a little happier Christ . The present state of the economy has increased the need and your help will be deeply appreciated," Chaplain Smith pointed out.

Any type of canned goods or dried food stuffs will be acceptable and can be left in the Chaplain's office or in the Combat Support Squadron's orderly room. Any monetary donations should be made out to KyANG Youth Fund and left with Colonel Woodcock or someone in the CSS orderly room. Your contributions are tax deductible.

AIR GUARD WOMAN (Cont'd):

She hopes to get the Guard interested in activities for senior citizens. One idea she has is a Guard-sponsored picnic for older Louisville residents.

"If I can do these two things (her Guard position and the new business) and make ends meet, I'll be satisfied," she said.

HOSPITAL MEMBERS ATTEND NATIONAL MEETING: Eight 123d Tac Hospital members recently represented the unit during the 89th Annual Meeting of the Association of Military Surgeons. The AMSIS conclave addressed Federal Health Challenges; Promotion, Prevention, and Preparedness. Persons attending the four day event included Doctors John Karibo, Sam Cooper, John Kukn, J.D. Moore and Robert McDonald, Major Verna Fairchild, Captain Sherra Rogers and CMSgt Jack Finck. For the first time the AMSUS sponsored a chief nurses meeting as part of the convention. Lt Col Aisen, nurse coordinator on the staff of the Air Surgeon chaired the session. Following the meeting Maj Fairchild was appointed to the Creditation Committee for Guard Nurses.

The money is being raised through donations by unit members. The Kentucky Center for Veterans Affairs is also seeking voluntary contributions from various business leaders in the commonwealth to sponsor transportation costs for another person to attend the observance in addition to the Guard member.

Burkessville residents attending the Oil Festival on Oct. 8 should look skyward at exactly 10 a.m. why? Because four RF-4C Phantom jets of the Louisville-based Kentucky Air National Guard will commemorate the first oil well in Kentucky. The commemorative, supersonic jets will be passing from east to west.

This won't be the first time Burkessville residents have seen these military machines. The Burkessville Bridge is a major national landmark for air-crowds during training missions.

Many residents imagine that the pilots of these aircraft are making mock bombing runs on the bridge. Nothing could be further from the truth. The Kentucky unit, which has 18 of the RF-4C aircraft, performs a photo reconnaissance mission. There is no armament whatsoever, either in forming missions in the case of critical military missions. Four highly sophisticated weapons in the form of the aircraft's guided conventional warheads to Army and Air Force commanders in a war situation.

The Kentucky Air National Guard (KANG) will also be featured in the Oct. 9 "Fly-Over" in the United States by the National Guard Association of the United States. The unit received the double trophy signifying the accomplishment for the first time in September. In addition the United States Air Force has honored the unit with two Air Force Outstanding Unit Awards in a row, receiving a four year reporting period.

The unit also distinguished itself in competition. Last year they finished first among all photo reconnaissance units based in the continental United States in a NATS sponsored competition held in December. One of 141th RBWs from the Commonwealth (based in the first place internationally) in Washington to say. They're the best photo reconnaissance unit in the world!

Normal combat missions in the RF-4C are flown at altitudes ranging from 100 feet to 20,000 feet at speeds often exceeding 400 miles per hour. The RF-4C can be refueled in flight. Optical, infrared and side-looking airborne radar and tactical electronic reconnaissance systems make the RF-4C one of the most versatile reconnaissance aircraft in the world.

The optical cameras are used primarily for day, low altitude photography. These cameras can produce forward-looking and side-looking oblique photography and mapping photography and horizon-to-horizon panoramic photography. Vertical photography can also be accomplished at night with luminous film photos taken cartridges which are dispensed from either side of the aircraft.

The infrared sensor locates enemy forces under cover or at night by detecting heat sources which differentiate. Unlike most optical cameras, which need a flash of light, the infrared systems use energy from infrared light energy radiated by objects within the sensor's field of view.

The RF-4C Phantom II aircraft is built by McDonnell Douglas and equipped with two General Electric (T80 turbojet) engines which produce 17,000 pounds of thrust each. The top speed is about 400 mph and has a range of 2,000 miles without refueling.

Crews of Burkessville during a closer look at one of these aircraft should watch the display on the sides of the unit's nose pod which takes place in late summer-early fall of the year.

Additional attractions throughout the day will include a display of antique and modern oil equipment, drawings for the girls and many other features.

Throughout the week a historical display of oil production equipment by Western Kentucky University will be on display at the Cumberland County Trade Center.
