ADJUTANT GENERAL'S REPORT.

OFFICE OF ADJUTANT GENERAL, FRANKFORT, KY., June 15, 1879.

To His Excellency GOVERNOR JAMES B. McCREARY:

GOVERNOR: I have the honor to submit the following report:

The new State Guard law went into effect April 8, 1878, and my intention was to make my annual report cover a period of one year's operation of that law by closing my report May 1, 1879. Several important changes in the State Guard occurring about that time, I deemed it advisable to withhold the publication until I could incorporate therein this supplementary information.

'I have been at some trouble in obtaining reports of active service rendered by State Guard troops, and, in one or two instances, I have altogether failed to secure reports called for. The idea prevailing with 'some officers, that the publication of report of services of troops under their command is a matter relating exclusively to their own credit and reputation, is a very great mistake. Commissioned officers, especially if in command, get their credit very cheaply through the newspaper correspondents and news dispatches; but the men who do the service, individually receive no credit, except through the official reports of their commanders. Members of the State Guard who may feel, in perusing the following reports, that others have gained more credit than they for the same service, will, with this explanation, know where to place the responsibility. Every effort has been made by this office to get full reports of all operations. The failure to make returns and reports called for, is a serious offense under the State Guard law, and this office has only been awaiting action on a case of such delinquency, already submitted, to set the law in motion against all who are or may be derelict in this particular.

In October last, detachments from the several Louisville companies were ordered on duty for two days, to guard a prisoner in the Jefferson county jail against the apprehended attack of a mob. A report of this employment of troops will be found in the following pages.

In December last, a command was sent to Breathitt county, to aid the civil authorities in enforcing the law. How the command, and the various detachments composing it, conducted themselves, will appear from the several accompanying reports on that expedition. The Commander first designated has failed to make an official report. First Lieut. L. N. Buck, who succeeded him in command, has submitted a report, appended hereto, which is both valuable and interesting. Lieut. Buck proved himself an efficient officer, and made a very favorable impression upon the community in which he was called upon to perform his difficult offices. He has since removed from this State, and the State Guard has thereby sustained a serious loss.

Lieut. Buck has also a report of the detachments of the Louisville Legion taking part in the Breathitt expedition, and under his immediate command, before he assumed command of the whole force.

A detachment of the Louisville Light Artillery, mounted as Cavalry, took part in the Breathitt expedition, under command of Second Lieut. A. C. Speed, whose report is appended hereto. Lieut. Speed showed himself to be a capable and energetic officer, and his detachment rendered very important and arduous service.

An interesting report in this connection is also appended hereto, made by Assistant Surgeon A. M. Vance, Louisville Legion.

I endeavored to secure a report from the Acting Quarter-master of the expedition of last winter, but he has failed to forward it. Such a report, if properly made, would greatly facilitate any future operations of State Guard troops in that section of the country, and would doubtless point out means by which a very great saving to the State could be made in future when it became necessary to transport or subsist bodies of State troops.

I have received no report from the Commander of the detachment of the McCreary Guards taking part in the expedition.

Capt. Taylor, the first Commander of the expedition, has made no report, but it is due to the men serving under him to state, that in a letter on the subject, he said: "I can bear cheerful testimony to the soldierly qualities of every man in the command, and I do not believe a better set of men were ever in the field."

All the reports testify to the good conduct of the men, with one or two exceptions. One man has since been dismissed from the service, on the recommendation of a court-martial, for his unsoldierlike and disgraceful conduct on the Breathitt expedition.

Whenever the State Guard troops have been called into service, they have responded cheerfully. The operations of last winter were extremely arduous; but the same men are anxious to render similar serIn my judgment, the men who have been sent into the field have not been sufficiently equipped. The blankets furnished the infantry last winter were altogether insufficient, and occasioned much discomfort. The overcoats furnished them were damaged, and did not give them the comfort they had a right to expect. When the mounted artillery detachment was sent from Louisville, you authorized me to purchase, in that city, blankets and overcoats for the men. At very reasonable cost, I procured excellent blankets, and, considering the suddenness of the order, very good overcoats.

I would also recommend, that when men are sent off to remote parts of the State, on these long expeditions, that they be furnished with fatigue uniform. Such uniform can be procured for a few dollars—not exceeding five or six a suit—and it seems hardly fair to compel the men to wear out their dress uniforms in such service.

I also recommend that provision be made for supplying the men, at any time needed, with knapsacks, haversacks, canteens, and tents. I do not think the State should be lavish in such things, nor do I think that such equipment should be issued to every new company that may be organized. In my judgment, the number of companies in the State Guard should be few, and none should be armed until they have been drilled and disciplined, as far as possible, without arms; and none should receive machinery or camp equipment until there is assurance the property will be preserved, and its usefulness appreciated. But when our companies are drilled and disciplined, and have learned these things, I consider it essential to the efficiency of the State Guard, and the maintenance of its organizations, that the equipment furnished by the State should be complete in every particular, or at least complete to the full extent of the apportionment of the annual Congressional appropriation, and the ability of the State Military Fund.

Since May 1, 1879, two new companies have been added to the State Guard, both of which have been included in the following register.

Respectfully submitted.

J. M. WRIGHT, Adjutant General.

REPORT OF MAJOR JOHN B. CASTLEMAN, COMMANDING LOUISVILLE LEGION, OF EMPLOYMENT OF PART OF HIS COMMAND, OCTOBER 25, 26, 1878.

Head quarters Louisville Legion, ARMORY, October 28, 1878.

GOVERNOR: I have the honor to submit the following report: On the receipt, through Adjutant General Wright, of your telegraphic instructions of 25th inst., I went on duty at the armory with detachments from the (5) five companies of the State Guard in this county, and remained on guard all night. We kept repeatedly advised as to the character of the hostile demonstrations at the jail, and were in readiness (and the public generally knew that we were in readiness) to support the civil authorities in the maintenance of law. The representation from the various companies was as follows:

Conforming to the instructions of the Adjutant General, in pursuance of your dispatch to him, the guard had been relieved from duty, and 'twas because the sheriff continued anxious, and asserted his dependence on the State troops here, that I was induced to telegraph you. On receiving your further reply, the troops, which had been held at the armory till 1:30 P. M., were dismissed.

The Adjutant General loaned the police twenty (20) stands of arms and two hundred (200) rounds of ammunition, and these have been returned to the armory.

There is scarcely a doubt but that the moral effect produced by your prompt action, in ordering the State Guard here under arms, prevented the lynching of Washington; and although the feeling favored his execution, and not a man in the State Guard but what would have been glad to see him hung, yet no one hesitated to obey your order in upholding the supremacy of the law.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN B. CASTLEMAN,

Captain Commanding.

' ING BREATHITT EXPEDITION, 1878-'79.

LOUISVILLE, Kv., February 26th, 1879.

REPORT OF FIRST LIEUTENANT L. N. BUCK, COMMAND-

GEN. J. M. WRIGHT, Adjutant General State of Kentucky:

In obedience to orders from you, dated February 17th, 1879, directing me to make a report to Major Castleman (to be forwarded) of the participation of the detachment from his battalion in Breathitt County Expedition, and also a report to you of the operation of the Breathitt county command, after I succeeded Capt. Taylor in command of the expedition, I have made the report to Major Castleman, and now respectfully make the following report to you. To avoid repetition, the report to Major Castleman extended only to the 28th of January, when Capt. Taylor was relieved; this will cover the subsequent period. For the same reason, you are respectfully referred to that report for the details of our camp duties. To these were added regular Sunday morning inspection, at which the quarters, clothing, accourrements, guns, ammunition, and guard-room were inspected. At one of these the needles in two guns were found by Lleut. Thompson to be broken, and the guns, consequently, useless. They were fixed. Taps were changed to of P. M., and strict silence thereafter enforced. The ranking noncommissioned officer in each room had charge of it, with power to report any violation of the rule. The kitchen could only hold half the command at one time; it was therefore divided into two details, each in charge of a First Sergeant, who called the roll at each meal, and marched his detail to it in ranks. The details went first to their meals on alternate days.

The following are copies of orders received and published:

Special Order Head-quarters Louisville Legion,

By order of Major Castleman.

Special Order Camp Taylor, Head-Quarters B. D. K. S. G., February 3d, 1879.

Privates Clement, Peay, Davidson, and Hunt, having reported for duty at these head-quarters, Sergt. Read, Corp. Davis, and private King will deliver their blankets, overcoat, gun, bayonet, and ammunition, respectively, to privates Clement, Peay, and Davidson, who are relieved from further duty in Breathitt county, and will report for duty at Louisville to their respective company commanders, and to Jno. B. Castleman, Major 1st Bat. K. S. G. Lieut. Vance, Asst. Surgeon 1st Bat. K. S. G., will turn over his gun, bayonet, and ammunition to private Hunt,

By order of L. N. Buck, Lieut. Com'dg B. D. K. S. G.

Special Order Camp Taylor, Head-quarters B. D. K. S. G., February 3d, 1879.

Private W. A. Hughes is appointed Corporal in Co. D., and will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

By order of L. N. Buck, Lieut. Commanding B. D. K, S. G. J. D. Wilson, 1st Sergeant, Co. D.

Nothing of interest occurred beyond the routine duty of guarding the prisoners, and protecting the Court with a strong guard, during the protracted trial of Alfred Gambrel, for the murder of Judge Burnett. No one was allowed to enter the jail, not even the Jailer, without being first thoroughly searched. The prisoners, when needed in Court, were brought there under a strong guard. One afternoon, from three different private sources information was received that that night the prisoners would attempt to escape by tunneling under the logs of the jail. They were carefully watched that night, and the next morning all the prisoners were removed under a strong guard, and the jail thoroughly searched, but nothing was discovered. Afterwards it was searched regularly every three or four days. The Governor was requested to send fourteen pair of handcuffs, in anticipation of their use in the removal of the prisoners. He sent eight new pair, and from a private person the only pair in Breathitt county was obtained, making nine pair. For three days and nights Jackson was visited with a cold, drenching rain. In this, without shelter, the sentinels had to stand. It caused some sickness in the command, which a few succeeding bright cold days, and Dr. Vance, quickly removed. With this exception, the health of the command was good.

The jail is a two-story log building, with two rooms on the ground floor and two up stairs. You enter one of the ground floor rooms through a common door with ordinary fastenings. This was the guard-room. A narrow stairway led from it to the room above, where three prisoners, charged with minor offenses, were confined. From this room, through a hole three feet square, closed by a wooden door, whose lock bolted into the wooden logs, and which was further fastened by a wooden prop on the outside, you entered the lock-up, a room capable of holding four conveniently, but in which fifteen prisoners (one had been released on bail) were packed. Some cracks between the logs and two holes, one on each side, through which a small man might stick his head, afforded scanty ventilation. Through a trap-door three feet square, in the middle of the floor of this room, by a ladder, you descended into the donjon, the other room on the ground floor. It was paneled with heavy oak boards.

It was used by the prisoners as a closet. This made the room above, offensive of itself with foul air, loathsome. It made the whole building unsavory. The prisoners were to be pitied, and could hardly be blamed for trying to escape. Some were made ill, when they were placed in the open front room and doctored until well enough to be put back, by the Surgeon of the command. One, to whom this favor was extended, when convalescent was caught prizing boards off an opening, and caused even this privilege to be granted with caution. There were three alarms on different nights. One was caused by the accidental discharge of a sentinel's gun. The others, by sentinels firing at the sound (it was too dark to see) of approaching steps which failed to cease at their challenge, Though false alarms, it was gratifying to see that the entire command, though in bed at the time, were under arms and formed in about two minutes after the report of the guns. One of the best soldiers in the command, Sergeant Phythian, McCreary Guards, was, by his business engagements, obliged to be relieved by a substitute. On or about February 1st, orders were received from the Governor to march the command, as soon as the pending term of court closed, by the nearest route to Mt. Sterling, and there report by telegraph for orders. These orders were not published until the night before the command left, at tattoo. The Governor had requested that they be kept strictly private. Sergeant Price, "McCreary Guards," was sent as a courier to Frankfort, for the funds necessary for the expense of the homeward march. He obtained them and promptly returned. The relatives and friends of the prisoners, on an order from Judge Randall, approved by the Commandant, were freely admitted to the jail to see them. The men were always searched. The prisoners whom the women wished to see were let out into the front room, and searched on their return.

Late on the afternoon of the 21st of February, there was a rumor current, that during that night the court-house would be attacked on the side opposite the jail by outside friends of the prisoners, and at the same time the prisoners were to make their escape. It seems that a portion of a conversation between one of the prisoners and his mother. in which the plan was detailed, was overheard. After dark Lobban, Sergeant of the guard, reported that he heard the prisoners trying to cut out. He and Dr. Vance were sent to examine, and soon reported that they had cut through the flooring of the donjon, and tunneled under the logs a hole large enough for a man to get through. This was found to be true. A squad was posted with loaded guns, and the prisoners ordered out and handcuffed, two together. The jail was searched. They cut through the oak flooring with their pocket-knives, and through the log-sleeper, and prized it away with an iron bar, and tunneled with a small shovel. All these instruments were removed, the knives of the prisoners taken from them, the hole stopped up, and prisoners returned to the jail. Some of them demurred to being handcuffed, and, after it was done, cursed loud and deep over it. One tried to break them off with a piece of iron torn from the jail, but was detected by Lobban, and the iron taken from him. A night or two previous one of the sentinels reported that the prisoners had attempted to make signals by throwing lighted paper from the jail. Shortly after they were handcuffed a crowd came down on the opposite side of the river waving a lantern backwards and forwards, and yelling at the top of their voices. The town was patroled during the night, which passed without further interruption. No one was allowed, after that night, to enter the jail under any pretext.

Judge Randall having applied for a guard to go with him to the limits of the county on his way home, Sergeant Wilson, Louisville Legion, and Berry, McCreary Guards, were detailed, on February 22d, for that purpose. They rode with him fifteen miles, and returned the same day.

The roads were so bad, and the Streams so swollen by recent rains and the melting of the snow, that, about ten days before we left, it was decided, if possible, to mount the entire command, pack the surplus baggage on mules, and do without wagons. On consultation, Lieut. Swigert thought the plan feasible. As the distance to the railroad could be ridden in two days, and it would take six or seven to walk and haul the baggage in wagons, the difference in the pay of the command for that time would nearly pay for the hire of the horses. Besides the expedition and comfort of riding, the fewer the nights we were on the march, the less the chances for the escape of the prisoners, whom, by order of the Court, we were to take with us. The difficulty was to know beforehand when the Court would close, as it required three days' time, at least, to get horses, which had to be brought from the neighborhood of Hazel Green, twenty-five or thirty miles away. Should the jury acquit Alfred Gambrel or fail to agree, Court would instantly close, and the orders were to march when it did.

Fortunately for the plan, the jury convicted him on February 20th, at I P. M., and three days would be required to make a motion for a new trial and prepare the bill of exceptions. Judge Jackson said Court would adjourn certainly on the afternoon of the 22d February. As soon as the verdict was read, Lieut. Swigert was instantly dispatched for the horses, and by his energy and activity succeeded in making contracts for the requisite number, and got back by 2 P. M., on February 22d. Some of the heaviest baggage, which could not be carried on horses, was shipped a week previous in a returning wagon. All Saturday and Saturday night, the cooks and volunteer assistants cooked beaten biscuit for the march. Eight hundred were thus made. That evening, about dark, the horses began to arrive-the first notice the command had that it was to ride home. It was midnight before all got in, and it was then found that, from inability to fulfill their contracts, at least twenty-nine horses were lacking to make enough to mount the command. While it was difficult to get horses, it was still more so to get saddles and bridles. On Sunday, the 23d of February, reveille was beaten at 3 A. M.; blankets equally distributed among the men; breakfast eaten, and rations for the march issued; the horses and mules chosen by lot; fifteen more horses and mules hired in the neighborhood of Jackson; twelve men placed in two two-horse wagons, and started at daylight; some bridles, extemporized out of rope, some saddles out of blankets, with rope stirrups; the remnants of the commissary stores and kitchen utensils sold by the commissary; Lieut. Thompson stationed with a squadron in the street; the prisoners, each brought out one by one, by four chosen guards, mounted, handcuffed, and formed into column, and at 9 A. M., with some of the prisoners riding double, some of the soldiers doing likewise, and one of them walking, the column moved out of Jackson, and rode without drawing rein, except to mount the men riding double and the one walking on horses secured along the route, twenty-five miles to Hazel Green. The road was miry, the streams swollen, and Red river almost swimming deep. Hazel Green was reached about sundown. The wagons, with the twelve men, arrived an hour later. There were twelve prisoners. The rest had been released on bail before leaving Jackson. Lieut. Swigert, riding ahead, had secured us comfortable quarters in Perat's Hotel, where the command was well lodged and fed. The prisoners were placed in one room and carefully guarded. The teamsters reported that the two wagons could not make the next day's march. Twelve more horses, to mount the men in them, were secured next morning. Reveille was sounded at 3:30 A. M., and, at ten minutes of 8, the column left Hazel Green, and rode, without halting, to Cornwall station, where it arrived at 4 P. M., and where the horses were turned over to the men who were to take them back. The command left there at 8 P. M. on a coal train, and reached Mt. Sterling at 10 P. M., where Judge Jackson, anticipating its arrival, had secured, and caused to be lighted and heated, the large court-room in the second story of the court-house, in which the command and prisoners comfortably lodged. It was midnight before all had supped; and as many were sore with riding and tired, reveille was postponed until 8 A. M. In the march over, every man had his place in the column assigned him, and kept it. At night they were kept in quarters, and marched to and from their meals in ranks. The arrival of the command was reported by telegraph to the Governor, who gave orders for it to proceed homeward on the next train. On February 25th, it came down on the 11:30 train. Lieut. Thompson, in command of the McCreary Guards, with Jason Little, sentenced for life to the penitentiary, in charge, got off at Frankfort. The rest reached Louisville at 6 P. M., and safely lodged the prisoners in jail there.

The following copy of an order explains itself:

Special Order | No. 14. FEBRUARY 25, 1879.

* * * * *

 The detachment from the McCreary Guards and Louisville Legion, engaged in the Breathitt expedition, having this day rejoined their respective companies, are, in accordance with Executive orders of February 24th, 1879, relieved from active service.

By order of Governor McCreary.

J. M. WRIGHT, Adjutant General.

To commanding officer detachment Louisville Legion.

In conclusion, it is but an act of justice to the officers and men under my command to say, that they did their whole duty and did it well, promptly and faithfully executed all orders, and bore themselves throughout as true and trained soldiers. Respectfully yours,

REPORT OF FIRST LIEUTENANT L. N. BUCK, COMMAND-ING DETACHMENT OF LOUISVILLE LEGION ON BREATHITT EXPEDITION, 1878-79.

Louisville, Kv., February 26, 1879.

MAJOR JNO. B. CASTLEMAN, Commanding Louisville Legion, First Battalion, Kentucky State Guards:

In obedience to orders from the Adjutant General, dated February 17th, 1879, directing me to make a report to you (to be forwarded) of the participation of the detachment from your battalion in Breathitt County Expedition; and also a report to the Adjutant General of the operation of the Breathitt county command after I succeeded Captain Taylor in command of the expedition, the following report is respectfully made to you. It will extend to the time when I succeeded Captain Taylor, as my report to the Adjutant General will cover the subsequent period. It will be understood, that in all details for special service made from the detachment of the Louisville Legion, an equal number of the "McCreary Guards" were detailed at the same time for the same purpose; but that their names are omitted in this report, as they will appear in the report of their company commander. Copies of orders are given in the order in which they were published, since they concisely show what was to be done, and who was to do it.

By order of Major CASTLEMAN.

[Signed] Pinckney F. Green, Adjutant Louisville Legion.

On the day this order was issued, the detachment, after receiving sixteen rounds of ammunition, proceeded via the Louisville, Cincinnati and Lexington Railroad to Frankfort; was reported to Capt. Taylor; exchanged their guns for better ones, and, in company with Lieut. Thompson and the "McCreary Guards," all under command of Capt. Taylor, proceeded, the same evening, to Mt. Sterling. There the whole command was quartered in a vacant store-room, with a damp, wet floor, for the night. Two stoves were rigged up, and succeeded in partially drying it. There was straw to sleep on, and blankets, which, upon acquaintance, proved too short, too narrow, too thin, too full of holes, and too few in number for a winter campaign. Fifty seven men, counting officers and their servant, Amos, in one room, and the novelty of the situation, banished sleep. A plain substantial supper and breakfast were served in a restaurant, which would have been better appreciated later in the campaign. Overcoats were issued in the morning. They had one recommendation, inasmuch as they did duty through the war of 1861, and had served as food for moths ever since. They instantly transformed, in appearance, the bright, fresh recruits into the oldest of veterans.

On December 12th the command proceeded, via a Coal Railroad, eighteen miles to Cornwall Station, where a ration of fat meat, cooked on the end of a stick at fires built in the woods, and crackers, composed our dinner. After which, it marched six miles to Frenchburg, and got a not very palatable taste of the snow and mud. Here the command was quartered in the court-house, took supper and breakfast at the hotel, cooked their own dinner, and waited one day for the Quarter-master end commissary train to arrive. This train consisted of two wagons—one drawn by horses, the other by two yoke of oxen. On each day's march it was guarded and assisted by the guard detail, which had a hard, rough, laborious experience, helping wagons through mud and snow over the hills and mountains.

It was found necessary, in assembling the detachment from Louisville Legion at roll-call, that it should have a short name, and that of Company "D" was fixed upon; and, as it became so familiar to the detachment, will be retained in the copies of Company orders.

On December 14th the command marched, through a cold, drenching rain and miry mud, fourteen miles to Maytown. The McCreary Guards were quartered in a school-house, Company "D" in a carpenter-shop. As this shop had no fire in it, and was wet and incapable of holding more than half of the Company, permission was given to those who could, to find resting-places in the adjoining private houses, of which a large majority availed themselves. The regulation—coffee, sugar, meat, and crackers—were issued for supper and breakfast.

Without a sigh of regret, on December 15th the command left Maytown (don't let the name deceive you), and, leaving the State road three miles this side of Hazel Green, took the Stillwater route, which proved to be better, and marched twelve or fourteen miles to Mr. Hurst's, with whom it, by contract, lodged and fed. It is charitable to suppose that it was the first time the good woman of the house ever undertook to feed fifty-seven famished foot soldiers. It is certain the attempt was a failure inwardly felt by the fifty-seven. One Company lodged in one room, the other in another. Some preferred sitting up around the camp fires in the yard to trying to sleep warm in the house. The following order was made here:

Special Order \ No. 1. \ Head-Quarters Company "D," \ December 15, 1878. \

Privates Alex. H. Jackson and D. J. Davis are hereby appointed Corporals in Company D, and will be obeyed and respected accordingly. By order of L. N. Buck, Lieut. Commanding Company D.

J. D. WILSON, First Sergeant.

On December 16th the command marched twelve or fourteen miles up Stillwater and down Frozen Creek, and encamped for the night in a grove of fine trees on the banks of the latter stream. The camp fires were quickly blazing, and the boys soon had their suppers cooked. Many passed a comfortable night on cornstalk-fodder beds. Some could not sleep for the cold. This place was dubbed "Camp Out" by one of the command, and the name met with the favor of all. Leaving Camp Out, after a march of five or six miles, we reached Jackson about noon on December 17th. The roads were so nearly impassable that the wagons had to be waited for continually on the march over. Most of the Louisville men, little dreaming of such a march, wore light shoes, which afforded no protection when wading the frequent streams. The command was quartered in the up stairs of the court-house, where bunks, capable of holding four-two below and two above-were soon constructed, and straw or hay placed loosely in them, or in ticks of brown cotton made by the boys. The court-room below was used as a sitting-room, kitchen, and guard-room at first. Afterwards, the guardroom was moved to the jail, and the kitchen to a small vacant storeroom. The magistrates of the county met soon after the command arrived, and, under its protecting bayonets, elected a County Judge. During the first day their rations were issued to the men, who cooked them by fires built in the streets. The cold was too intense, the snows too frequent, to continue this. Lieut. Swigert, Quarter-master and Commissary, purchased two small cooking stoves, and two men from each Company volunteered, with the assistance of the officers' servant, to cook for the whole command. They were relieved from all other duty, yet they merit the grateful thanks of their comrades. Corporal Kaye and private Vance were the volunteers from "D" Company. The kitchen department, which included the dining-room, was in charge of Vance. There were two meals a day, necessarily at irregular hours. Coffee, sugar, middling, and biscuit, generally constituted the bill of fare. Frequently it was varied with fresh beef, soup, beans, potatoes, onions, cabbage, or molasses. The smallness of the stoves, and the difficulty of their procuring supplies, limited the variety of dishes. As a rule, the command had to cut and haul and chop the wood necessary for cooking, and sometimes haul the coal it used.

After the arrest and confinement of the law-breakers began, guard duty was heavy, and, from the unusually severe and cold weather, difficult to endure. Two non-commissioned officers and twelve privates, taken equally from the two companies, constituted the guard for twentyfour hours. There were four posts, and sentinels were on two and off four hours. All the guard were required to stay in the guard-house, and to sleep on their arms. When court was in session, and that was the case nearly all the time the command was in Jackson, a special guard of eight men, under one of the First Sergeants, stood in the court-room, while one of the non-commissioned officers and a sentinel of the regular guard stood at the door and searched all who entered the court-room, except officers of the court. When it is remembered that four men were detailed as cooks, and that sometimes details of from six to ten men would be away on special service for two or three days, it will be seen how heavy the guard duty was. Guard mounting occurred every day at 4 o'clock P. M., reveille at 7 A. M., tattoo, at 8 P. M., and taps at 9 P. M; breakfast and supper, when they were ready. On December 21st the Circuit Judge arrived. A day or two previous Jerry Little knocked a man down in the street with his pistol, and it had the instant effect of closing the houses and stores for the rest of the day. On December 22d, he, with Jack Little, rode up and down the street firing their pistols, and halted in front of Judge Randall's room, abusing and cursing him, and threatening to shoot him. Their arrest was ordered. The following is the detail from Company D—Capt. Taylor commanded in person: 1st Sergeant Wilson, Sergeant Garretty, private McDonald, private Stokes, and private Knott. Both were arrested.

The same evening Alfred Gambrel and Alfred Little were arrested and imprisoned.

Detail—Lieut. Buck commanding: Sergt. Wilson, private Smith, private Griffith, private Elwang, and private Hutchins.

That night the house in which these four men were captured was searched for their arms.

Detail—Lieut. Buck commanding: Sergt. Wilson, Corp. Kaye, private Griffith, private King, and private Smith. But one pistol was found.

On December 23d, George Haddix was arrested at a house on the opposite side of the river.

Detail—Lieut. Thompson commanding: private Churchill, private Hughes, and private Winston.

A daily courier to Hazel Green had been established; but at this period the mails were irregular, and generally a week would elapse without any arriving. The supply train was past due, and a detail, in which were McDonald, Hughes, and Thornton, was sent out to meet it. After an absence of three days and much hard labor, they brought it in on New Year's day. It had been on the road from Mt. Sterling for ten days. The rations were getting very short. This train brought a number of Christmas boxes, and, what was more needed, fifty pairs of blankets. The command could now do, what hitherto it could not, sleep warmly and comfortably. The following order was made that day:

Special Order Camp Taylor, January 1st, 1879.

Private Arthur Elwang being obliged to return to Louisville to attend college, and there being one man in excess of the number originally ordered from the Louisville Legion as the detachment to go to Breathitt county, is relieved from further duty in Company D, and he will report for duty to Major Jno. B. Castleman, 1st Battalion Ky. S. G., and to his company commander at Louisville.

By order of L. N. Buck, Lieut. Commanding Co. D.

J. D. Wilson, First Sergeant.

There being some fear lest the Sheriff's posse, who had Jason Little in charge, bringing him from the Richmond jail to Jackson for trial, would be attacked for the purpose of rescuing the prisoner, a detail was, on January 4th, made to meet that posse, and bring in the prisoner. In it were—Lieut, Buck commanding: Sergeant Read, privates Griffith and Peay.

This detail went on horseback, during very cold weather, to within one mile of Beattyville, met the posse, brought in the prisoner, and were gone two days.

The following copies of orders will explain themselves:

Special Order Camp Taylor, January 20th, 1879.

Private Waide having reported as a substitute for private Knott, the latter will turn over to his substitute his blankets, overcoat, gun, bayonet, and ammunition, is relieved from further duty as private in Company D, and will report for duty at Louisville to Major John B. Castleman, First Battalion Kentucky State Guard, and to his Company commander.

By order of L. N. Buck, Lieutenant Commanding Company D.

J. D. Wilson, First Sergeant.

Annroved: F. H. Tavior Captain Commanding R. D. K. S. C.

Private Knott had been detailed to go with a squad of cavalry to capture prisoners, and was absent when his substitute reported on the 19th January.

It was rumored that four of the men, indicted for the murder of Judge Burnett, were in the neighborhood, and on the night of 22d of January a detail was made to effect their capture. In it were Lieut. Buck, commanding; private McDonald, private Monroe, private Samuels, private Stultz, and Corp. Jackson. It started at 8 P. M., marched on foot twelve to fifteen miles across the mountain, slippery with ice, through creeks over kneep-deep, and in mud and snow, searched ten houses, captured one of the four men, "Dan Little," and reached quarters by daylight the next morning. It was a piece of tough service.

On the succeeding night a detail went after the same men. In it were Lieut. Thompson, commanding; private Samuels, private Smith, private Robinson, and Corp. Davis. It captured no one, but its experience was, in other respects, similar to the one mentioned above.

On January 19th a detail was sent out to assist the supply train across , the mountains. In it we're Sergeant Wilson, private Monroe, and private Stokes.

With the prisoners arrested by the troops, and those who had voluntarily surrendered and been arrested by the civil officers, there were now sixteen men confined in the lock-up room of the log jail, and three in the outer room. One of these, Jason Little, was convicted and sentenced to the Penitentiary for life for wife-murder. The prisoners made an attempt to escape, by burning with a red-hot poker through the log in which the bolt of the lock fastened; but were discovered, and an intimation from Capt. Taylor that, on their next attempt to escape, they would be fired on, kept them quiet until he left. On the 28th of January, to the sorrow and regret of the entire command, compelled by his domestic affairs and business engagements to leave, Capt. Taylor, at his own request, was relieved by the Governor. On the morning of the 29th he left. This report concludes here; and, in conclusion, it is due to the members of the Louisville Legion under my command, that their Battalion Commander should know how well they did their duty; how they endured cold and suffered privations, without a murmur; how they obeyed orders with alacrity and cheerfulness; how steady they were in the face of real or supposed danger; and it gives me great pleasure to testify to these facts.

Respectfully, yours, &c.,

Louisville Light Artillery, Bat. "A." K. S. G., State Guard Armory, Louisville, Kv., Jan. 26th, 1879.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to make the following report concerning services rendered by a detachment composed of myself and fourteen men of the Louisville Light Artillery, acting as cavalry at Jackson, Breathitt county, Kentucky. On Wednesday, January 1st, 1879, at 11 o'clock, A. M., I received the following order:

Company Orders L. L. A., Battery "A.," K. S. G.,
No. 1. Louisville, Ky., January 1st, 1879.

In pursuance of Special Orders No. 1, Adjutant General's Office, dated January 1st, 1879, Second Lieutenant A. C. Speed is ordered, with a detail of three non-commissioned officers and eleven men, to proceed on the Mt. Sterling train, at 2:40 o'clock this P. M., to Frankfort, Kentucky, where he will receive further instructions.

[Signed] E. H. Moise, Captain Commanding Battery " A." K. S. G.

In obedience to the above order, the following detail was made and ordered to report to me at the armory at 1:30 o'clock, P. M., promptly, fully armed and equipped, to leave on said train:

Second Lieut. A. C. Speed, Sergeant Geo. S. Bowman, Sergeant Oscar Davis, Corporal T. M. DeHoney, Corporal J. M. Fults, Corporal V. S. Wright, private W. P. Lincoln, private Alf. E. Mayers, private Benj. F. Schardine, private Alf. Oldham, private Geo. W. Clarke, private Alf. Hassan, private M. J. Weison, and private Frank Hodges.

At the stated hour, every man having reported, we left Louisville on 2:40 o'clock P. M. train, receiving voucher for transportation from Adjutant General J. M. Wright, also a good warm overcoat and one pair of new blankets to each man; the weather quite cold, and thermometer rapidly falling, with snow on the ground some four inches deep.

On my arrival at Frankfort at 5:45 o'clock P. M., guns were issued, with 30 rounds of ammunition to each man, and the following order handed me by Gov. James B. McCreary, dated—

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S REPORT.

Frankeorr, Kv., January 1, 1879.

Lieut. Speed and fourteen men of the Louisville Light Artillery are ordered into active service, and directed to proceed to Mt. Sterling, where Col. J. P. Nuckols, Quarter-Master General, will furnish horses, and the detachment will be mounted. Lieut Speed will assume command, and report without unnecessary delay to Capt. E. H. Taylor at Jackson, Breathitt county, Kentucky, to act in conjunction and subordinate to the civil authorities in preserving the peace and enforcing the law. Unless otherwise ordered, Lieut. Speed will return to Mt. Sterling, Kentucky, by the 16th day of January, 1879, restore the horses to the persons from whom they were hired, and report to me for further

[Signed.] JAMES B. McCREARY, Governor,

In obedience to this order, I reported to Col. J. P. Nuckols, Quarter-Master General, at Mt. Sterling, Kentucky, arriving there on train at 8:35 o'clock, P. M., where he had procured comfortable quarters at the Coleman House.

January 2d, 1879.—After roll-call and breakfast, the men were informed at which stable they would get their horses, and were all ready to move at 8:300'clock, A. M; the thermometer being stationary at five degrees below zero.

The command was given to march, and we were soon on our way for Jackson. Our road lay almost due south, over hills and through creeks, which were then frozen. Nothing of note transpiring, we reached Frenchburg, Menifee county, at 5 o'clock, P. M., a distance of twenty-one miles from Mt. Sterling, getting comfortable quarters at the Greenwade Tavern.

Friday, January 3d, '79.—At 7 o'clock, A. M., the men were all in the saddle and ready to march. The command being given, we were again on our way, our general route for this day being a little east of south; the thermometer being as low as 15 degrees below zero, and remaining at that point all day. As we advanced, the hills not only became larger, but more numerous. We reached Hazel Green, Wolfe county, by 5 o'clock, P. M., a distance of twenty-three miles from Frenchburg, without difficulty or unnecessary delay, getting good quarters at the Pieratt House.

Saturday, Fanuary 4th, '79.—Promptly at 7:30 o'clock, A. M, we were on the march, our route being in the same direction, but more difficult to travel; the thermometer at 10 degrees below zero, but gradually rising. I reached Jackson at 4:30 o'clock, P. M., a distance of twenty-six miles from Hazel Green. Having drawn up a line in front of the courthouse, at which place the Militia were quartered, I dismounted and reported to Capt. E. H. Taylor, as directed in Governor's order. After having stabled and fed our horses, we were assigned quarters with the rest of the Militia within the court-house, by Lieut. Jacob Swigert, Assistant Quarter-Master.

Sunday, January 5th, '79.—At 8 o'clock, A. M., I was ordered by Capt. Taylor to select a detail of six men, under command of a Sergeant, to lead out, and prepare to move at any moment. This detail was under command of Sergeant Oscar Davis, and was composed of the following named men: Sergeant Oscar Davis, Corporal V. S. Wright, Geo. E. Tuck, Benj. F. Schardine, Alf. Oldham, M. J. Welson. The detail remained awaiting orders until 1 o'clock, P. M., at which time the order was countermanded, and the horses were again stabled, the detail remaining in camp all day.

Monday, January 6th, '79.—The detail, under command of Sergeant Davis, was awakened very early, and ordered by Capt. Taylor to lead out and hold themselves in readiness to move with Deputy Sheriff Patrick at his convenience. The Deputy being unavoidably detained, Sergeant Davis did not get started until 11 o'clock, M. Here I will leave this detail under command of Sergeant Davis, and give his report when he returns.

At 12 o'clock, M., I was ordered by Capt. Taylor to take the remaining number of my original detail, and accompany Deputy Sheriff Alex. Hargis in quest of one John Aikman, indicted for malicious shooting and wounding of William Freeman and the murder of Dan. Freeman.

This detail was composed of the following named men: Second Lieutenant A. C. Speed, Sergeant Geo. S. Bowman, Corporal T. M. DeHoney, Corporal J. M. Fults, W. P. Lincoln, Alf. E. Mayers, Geo. W. Clarke, and Frank B. Hodges.

river to the right, going through valleys and over hills, making the best time that could be made over such roads, stopping at dark at the farmhouse of Mr. W. W. Strong, where we were made as comfortable as circumstances would permit.

Thesday, January 7, '79—We were on the march shortly after day-light; our general route for this day laying a little east of south; the weather somewhat warmer than the day previous. As we advanced the hills became mountains, and more difficult to climb. During the day we crossed Caney and Middle Ridges, two of the highest mountains in that county, and several others of lesser note, that were not so high or so difficult to climb, continuing down Grapevine creek to the Kentucky river; then up the left bank of the river some three miles to Hazard, Perry county, Kentucky, reaching that place at 7:30 o'clock; traveling a distance of twenty-six miles during the day. Here we again had comfortable quarters for both man and horse.

Wednesday, January 8th, '79.—Started at 7:30 o'clock, A. M., in a heavy rain, that continued throughout the whole day. At about 12, M., we crossed from the left to the right bank of Kentucky river, and continued up that bank to a stream called Big Leatherwood creek; turning then to the right, and up that stream, to the farm-house of Anderson Cornitt, where we again had comfortable quarters and plenty of forage for our horses. During the night it rained harder, all the streams rising bank full, breaking up the ice gorges, &c. This place was in the upper edge of Perry county.

Thursday, January 9th, '79.—On examination, found it impossible to cross any of the streams on account of the depth and floating ice. Being water-bound, we remained here until next day.

Friday, January 10th, '79.—On examination this morning, found the streams fordable, and left at an early hour, going up the left bank of Little Leatherwood creek some ten miles. We here crossed a mountain on our left, descending by, and continuing down the right fork of Turkey creek, reaching the main branch at I o'clock, P. M.; the weather having greatly moderated, and the snow melting in the sun. We then turned to our right, and up the left bank of the main fork of Turkey creek for half a mile; then up a mountain stream to our left, crossing over the highest mountain we had as yet crossed, it being almost impossible to take our horses with us. I had learned that, by going over this mountain, that it was but two miles over to Line Fork creek, and by going around the mountain and up the bed of the creek, that it was ten. I then determined to cross the mountain, thinking I would save time and travel. After two hours' hard labor we reached the top, and in a few moments commenced our descent, striking Line Fork at the foot of the mountain. We reached the farm-house of Mose Isam, on this creek, at 5:30 o'clock, P. M., getting comfortable quarters, and plenty of food and forage. We here learned that Aikman was within four miles of us on Ingram creek.

Saturday, January 11, '79.-Were up and in the saddle at 3:30 o'clock, A. M., and proceeded up the bed of the creek for four miles; then turning to the left, up Ingram creek. We had not advanced far when we reached the house of his brother-in-law, J. W. Ingram, at day-light. This we soon surrounded and searched. Not finding him here, we kept up the creek a distance of one half mile to the house of his brother, Pete Aikman, which we surrounded, and at which house we made the arrest at 6 o'clock, A. M. We returned and breakfasted at Mr. Isam's, with our prisoner in charge, after which we continued our journey down Line Fork, and around the mountain we had crossed the day before. We had not gone far when we met his brothers, who had been posted at this point to convey him the news of our arrival, and give him time to get into Virginia. They having heard of our crossing the mountain the day before, were (at the time of meeting) returning with the prisoner's horses. At 5 o'clock, P. M., we again reached the farm-house of Mr. Cornitt; the weather indicating rain.

Sunday, Fanuary 12, '79.—Rained hard all night and day, and were again water-bound, and unable to move from this place.

Monday, January 13, '79.—On examination, found the streams again fordable, and were on our way at 7 o'clock, A. M., going down the left bank of Kentucky river, some ten miles, and, not being able to cross at any point, we were compelled to stop here over night, and divide the detail, so as to be fed, the people at this point being without meal, &c.

Tuesday, January 14th, '79.—The river still being too high to ford, we compelled our horses to swim, the men crossing over in a canoe. Then continued down the left bank of the river, making Hazard, Perry county, at 5:30 o'clock, P. M., where we again had comfortable quarters and plenty of food and forage.

Wednesday, January 15th, '79.—Left Hazard at 7:30 o'clock, A. M., going down the right bank of the river, until we reached a fork in the road, three miles below Hazard, turning to the right, and crossing a mountain, striking Lost creek, and following down that stream some fourteen miles into Breathitt county. Laboring under some great disadvantages, we were compelled to put up at the farm-house of Granville Noble. Here we had plenty of subsistence for both man and beast.

Thursday, January 16th, '79 .- All up at daylight, and on the march. The weather very damp and penetrating. We continued down Lost creek to a stream called "Troublesome," which we had to cross. The ice being so high, we had to cut our way through it and down to the water, where we again made our horses swim, the men relieving them of their saddles and blankets, and carrying them over in a canoe. Soon saddled and again on the march; but had not traveled far before we struck the South Fork of Quicksand creek, which we forded, saddle deep; then down the right bank of that stream some four miles to the main branch of Quicksand, and the mouth of the North Fork of the same stream, which we crossed as before, making our horses swim, the men crossing in a canoe. No sooner had we crossed this stream than we were compelled to make numerous ascents and descents over hills and mountains, striking the left bank of Kentucky river (going up) two miles below Jackson, which place we reached in good order, and with our prisoner in charge, at 4:30 o'clock, P. M., turning him over in charge of the Post Commander, Capt. E. H. Taylor. Stable duty, &c., having been attended to, we were soon seated around a good warm fire in the court-house.

Friday, January 17th, '79.—Remained in camp all day, having our horses re-shod, &c. Lieut. Jacob Swigert, Assistant Quarter-Master, having just returned from Frankfort, brought with him the following order addressed to me:

Frankfort, Kv., January 13, 1879.

LIEUT. SPEED, Commanding Detachment Mounted Men Ky. State Guard:

You are directed to remain in Breathitt county, subject to the order of W. H. Randall, Circuit Judge of the 15th Judicial District, until the 21st of January, 1879, unless sooner relieved by Judge Randall, or otherwise ordered by me.

[Signed] James B. McCreary, Governor.

With a letter accompanying the above order, dated also January 13th, 1879:

LIEUT. SPEED, Commanding Detachment Mounted Men:

SIR: When I first ordered you to report to Judge Randall, I informed him that the mounted men would remain subject to his order for two weeks. He has not informed me whether he would need you for a longer period than this. I send by Lieut. Swigert another order, directing you to remain until 21st day of January, if Judge Randall needs

you. If you receive this order after Judge Randall has expressed a willingness to dispense with the mounted men, it will not be necessary for you to remain in Breathitt; but if you have not consulted with him about leaving Breathitt and returning to Louisville, you will inform him of the order, and do as he directs you.

Respectfully,

[Signed]

JAMES B. McCREARY.

In accordance with the above order and letter, I interviewed Judge Randall on the subject, and was told that he would relieve me from further duty on the morning of the 21st instant, and to make my arrangements to start for Louisville at that time.

Saturday, January 18th, '79.-Remained in camp until 2 o'clock, P. M., when I received an order from Judge Randall to saddle and lead out, which order was promptly executed. Received orders then from him to accompany Deputy Sheriffs Hargis and Patrick in quest of the Allen boys, who were supposed to be in the neighborhood. We left camp at 2:30 o'clock, P M. The weather being very much warmer, and the roads not so slippery, we found traveling much easier than on our previous trip. We crossed the river at Jackson, then following up on right bank a short distance, crossed over a mountain to our right, striking Cane creek some three miles from camp; continuing up the left bank of this stream some three miles further on, where the creek forked. We continued up the left fork until we reached its head, where was impossible to get along in the darkness, as trees had fallen and seemingly blocked our passage. Finding it impossible to feel our way, we turned back to a negro cabin, where we put up for the night. The parties being without meal and forage, the men and horses suffered alike, both from cold and hunger.

Sunday, January 19th, '79.—We were up and on the march very early, crossing over a mountain to our left, over which there was no path, but very deep snow. After crossing the mountain, we continued down a small stream some two miles, where we stopped at the house of Alex. Davidson; here we got a comfortable breakfast and corn for our horses. From this point we turned to the left, down another creek to the river, and stopping at 'Squire Gambrail's, at whose house we supposed to make the arrests. Finding they had left some days before, I then held a consultation with the Deputies, and returned, leaving them to find the whereabouts of the parties. I returned by the same route, arriving at camp at 3:30 o'clock, P. M., and reporting to Capt. E. H. Taylor. At 8 o'clock, P. M., Sergeant Davis returned with his detail, having in charge one William Flincham, who he immediately turned over to Capt. E. H. Taylor, commander of the post.

Monday, January 20th, '79.—Remained in camp all day, having our horses rough-shod, so as to start for Mount Sterling on the following day.

Tuesday, Fanuary 21st, '79.—Having gathered everything together that we had in camp, we left about 9 o'clock, A. M., en route for Mount Sterling, our route being that by which we had come; swimming Red river on horseback, and reaching Hazel Green, Wolfe county, at 5 o'clock, P. M., stopping at the Peiratt House, where both horses and men were well cared for.

Wednesday, January 22d, 1879.-Were up and had an early start, going over the same road; we reached Frenchburg, Menifee county, at 2 o'clock, P. M., where we found the streets crowded almost to their utmost capacity. Upon inquiry, found that court was in session. After dismounting, was met by a Mr. Derickson, one of the attorneys for the prosecution in the case of Commonwealth vs. Wm. Barnes, for the murder of Stevens. He (Derickson) said to me that he expected that Barnes' friends would try to release him from jail, and that the Sheriff and his posse (who were then guarding him) had been up for two or three nights without sleep, and that if it was possible for us to stay over night in Frenchburg, that they (the attorneys for prosecution), as well as the good citizens of the county, would be under obligations. I explained what my duties were in such cases, and asked for a written request, signed by the Judge of the court The Judge, thinking it. would give Barnes a chance to apply for a new trial upon the grounds of intimidation, refused. I returned to the hotel, where I found two of my men sick, and one of the horses of my command water-foundered, thus making it impossible for me to continue my journey until morning. After court adjourned, I was invited into the room of Messrs. Kendall, Stone, and Derickson, the attorneys for the prosecution. Mr. Kendall, thinking that Barnes' friends might (if a chance was offered) secure our arms, suggested that they be issued to them again, and, upon going out, overheard a very suspicious conversation between two parties outside. I immediately mounted guard, and at bed-time issued arms, with orders to sleep with their clothes and accoutrements on, and kept a guard mounted during the whole night.

Thursday, January 23d, 1879.—Nothing unusual happened during the night. We left Frenchburg at 8 o'clock, A. M., continuing over the same road, and reached Mt. Sterling at 3 o'clock, P. M., a distance of

22 miles. Returning our horses to their proper owners as directed, we secured quarters at the Coleman House. I then telegraphed to Gov. James B. McCreary of my arrival, and for transportation, to which I received the following answer:

FRANKFORT, January 23, 1879.

LIEUT. SPEED, Commanding Detachment Ky. State Guard:

You are directed to deliver the horses to their owners at Mt. Sterling. Transportation will be delivered to you at Frankfort for yourself and fifteen men by the Quarter-Master General, who will also receive your arms and accourrements, and you will proceed by rail to Louisville, and, on your arrival there, you and your command are relieved from active service. If you need any assistance in delivering the horses, call on Joseph Jordan. Answer.

[Signed]

JAMES B. McCREARY, Governor.

To the above I answered, as directed, by telegraph:

MT. STERLING, January 23, 1879.

GOV. JAS. B. McCREARY, Frankfort, Ky .:

All the horses returned in a condition satisfactory to their owners, except one horse belonging to Joseph Jordan, which is slightly water-foundered.

A. C. Speed, Lieut. Commanding Detachment Ky. S. G.

Friday, January 24th, 1879.—Left Mt. Sterling on 11:45 A. M. train, stopping at Frankfort, and receiving transportation from and delivering arms and accourtements to, Gen. J. P. Nuckols, Quarter Master General; arriving at Louisville at 6 o'clock, P. M., being received and escorted by our full company, under command of Capt. E. H. Moise, from the depot to the armory, where I dismissed the detachment.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

A. C. SPEED,

Lieut. Com. Detachment Battery " A," Ky. S. G., acting as Cavalry at Jackson, Breathitt County, Ky.

To CAPT. E. H. Moise, Capt. Commanding Battery "A" Ky. S. G., Louisville, Kentucky:

Inclosed please find pen report of Sergeant Oscar Davis to me.

A. C. SPEED.

I failed in my report to mention the conduct and soldierly bearing of the men. They were all excellent soldiers, and deserve the highest commendation, both in conduct and discipline. Sergeant Davis reports to me the same of his detail.

A. C. Speed,

Second Lieut. Battery " A," Ky. S. G.

REPORT OF SERGEANT O. DAVIS, OF A DETACHMENT UNDER HIS COMMAND; FROM JANUARY 6TH, 1879, TO JANUARY 20TH, 1879, INCLUSIVE.

Jackson, Breathitt County, Ky., January 20th, 1879.

LIEUT. A. C. Speed, Commanding Detachment Mounted Men L. L. A .:

LIEUT.: I have the honor to submit the following report of the detail composed of Oscar Davis, Sergeant, V. S. Wright, Corporal, and privates A. V. Oldham, B. F. Schardine, G. E. Tuck, and M. J. Weisen, placed under my command 6th instant, to accompany Deputy Sheriff Patrick to Jackson county as escort.

The detachment was ready to start early on the morning of the 6th; but, owing to the delay of the Sheriff, did not depart until 11 o'clock of that date. The weather was intensely cold, and although our route lay along frozen-over creeks, and over a very rough mountainous country, we succeeded in reaching Booneville, Owsley county, about twenty-five miles distant from Jackson, by 5:30 o'clock, P. M., when the Sheriff ordered a halt for the night.

A short time after our arrival at this place, I learned that a posse of three men (deputies under the ex-Sheriff) from Jackson had left Booneville as we entered, with warrants to arrest the men we were in quest of. I suggested to Mr. Patrick that we overhaul the posse, and not allow them to go in advance, as they were not strong enough to capture the outlaws, and could but place them on the alert; but he declined to interfere with them.

The next morning (7th) we continued on our journey, and at eleven o'clock, A. M., arrived at a cross-road in Jackson county, twelve or fifteen miles from Booneville, where we secured the services of Sheriff Flannery, of Jackson county, to guide us to the houses of the men we were in search of, viz: Riley Flincham, John Allen, and —— Allen,

At 3 o'clock, P. M., we started, and in two and a half hours reached Riley's store, twelve miles from the cross-road, where we had halted. Here Sheriff F. was informed that the men we were after were at home, and prepared for defense. Our programme being to surprise them after dark, we rode slowly about two miles to S. E. Welsh's store, situated one half mile from Riley Flincham's. Here we learned that the posse we heard of at Booneville had (about four hours previous to our arrival) been to Flincham's house, causing him and the Allens to take to the adjacent mountains. Thinking they might have returned by this time, we proceeded to surround Flincham's house, which we did; then made a thorough search of the premises, but found, as I feared, the warning they had received was sufficient, and they had fled.

We returned to Welsh's at 10, P. M., where we were soon engaged in devouring a very frugal supper of corn bread and bacon, not having eaten anything since early morning. About this time it commenced raining, and continued to do so throughout the night and the whole of the following day.

As soon as our horses had finished eating we continued the search at John (Whick) Allen's and William and Golden Flincham's. This occupied the whole night, and we met with no success, either in apprehending the fugitives or in gaining any information as to their whereabouts. It being now day, we went to the residence of Dr. G. W. Cook, where we breakfasted, and took a rest of a couple of hours, when we left our host (who, by the way, refused pay for our entertainment) to go again in pursuit of the fugitives, who we heard were making for Breathitt county down Island creek. We scouted around, and finally crossed the mountain, and followed down that stream, meeting but few people, and receiving but very meagre and unsatisfactory information. Arriving at the South Fork of Kentucky river about dark, and fearing to cross on account of the water and snow on the ice (a hard cold rain had fallen until 4 o'clock, when it began snowing), we concluded to stop at a farmhouse for the night.

The next morning we sat down to an early breakfast. Here let me mention an amusing remark made by our host, Mr. Ambrose. Having been in the saddle for two days and one night, and in the worst kind of weather, most of us were pretty well worn out, more especially the Sheriff, who refused to get up with the others. I apologized for him, when Mr. Ambrose replied: "I guess the Sheriff aint used to hardships like you soldiers." We could not help laughing heartily at the remark, and explained that we were not constantly engaged in expeditions of this kind.

We found, on going to the river, that it had risen fifteen or twenty feet, breaking up the ice, and, of course, leaving it impossible to cross. Mr. Ambrose not having sufficient provisions to keep us longer, we went to Booneville, eight miles distant, where we were compelled to remain the balance of that day (9th), and the 10th. As the water receded, the ice was left piled out on the banks, so that we were occupied all of the 10th cutting a passage-way to the river and out on the opposite side. Saturday the 11th, after launching the ferry-boat (which had been left high out on the bank), we proceeded on our return journey, which was necessarily slow, on account of the snow being thirteen inches deep. At the Middle Fork, by exercising great caution, and with the assistance of some plank, we effected a dangerous crossing on gorged ice without accident. When night overtook us, we were near Mr. Calloway Crawford's, where we stopped until morning, when we proceeded towards Jackson. Arriving at the river opposite the town, we were unable to cross with the horses, the gorged ice not being solid enough to support them. I dismounted and reported to Capt Taylor at camp. He ordered the detachment to Mr. Hargis', about one mile down the river, there to remain until a crossing could be effected, and I to report back to camp. That night the river raised and was cleared of ice; in the morning (13th) I went to Hargis' and brought the detachment into camp, having been absent just one week.

The following morning, Tuesday (14th), Judge Randall called for an escort to accompany Sheriff Little to execute several warrants of arrest; and as the Sheriff had information that these men had banded together for the purpose of resistance, Capt. Taylor ordered privates Knott, of Louisville Legion, and Graham, of the McCreary Guards, on duty with my detachment.

We stated at 10 o'clock, A. M., and after crossing the river we found that the ice had been so piled in the path under the cliff as to completely obstruct it. We were compelled, therefore, to climb the almost perpendicular mountain, over which there was neither road or horse-path. Two hours were required in making this passage; several of the horses lost their footing, and rolled quite a distance down the mountain, and it seemed as if some of the men or horses would surely be killed or maimed; but, to our surprise and gratification, all escaped unhurt. We took up our march westward, allowing no one to pass on ahead to give notice of our approach, riding until 10-30, P. M., without a stop, over the roughest country we had yet seen. The men and horses being very much fatigued, the Sheriff ordered a halt until morning, and quartered us at Mr. Joseph Little's, whose house was a small log hut of but one room. Spreading our blankets on the floor, we turned in and enjoyed a most refreshing sleep, although there were eleven men, one woman, and five children crowded in that small room.

The next morning, before we had breakfast, the Sheriff received a note from Luther Callahan (one of the men we were searching for), offering to surrender himself into custody. (How he knew we were in the vicinity was a puzzle to me; but I have about come to the conclusion that the "grapevine" telegraph is almost equal to the electric.) We started at once for Callahan's house, situated on Long's creek, six miles from Joseph Little's. The roads were nearly impassable, and we did not arrive until near noon, when his wife told us he had gone squirrel hunting.

The remainder of the day was devoted to scouting in the western part of Breathitt county, but without gaining any information as to the whereabouts of the men wanted. At night the detachment was divided and accommodiated with lodging by two brothers named Reynolds, living about five miles from Booneville.

The next morning the Sheriff concluded to go to Jackson county, to the neighborhood of the Allens and Flinchams. We arrived at Wm. Flincham's that night (Thursday, 16th) about 11:30, and arrested him in his bed. We immediately left for a farmer's about three miles off, where we put up for the night.

There being no more of the outlaws in that vicinity, we started early the following morning for Breathitt, expecting to make some arrests on the return route.

We reached Booneville that night, and, as the river was so high we could not cross the Middle Fork, we concluded to remain over the next day where we were. Sunday, the 19th, having secured a horse for the prisoner (we had up to this time carried him by turns behind us on our horses), we continued our march to Jackson. Sunday was a very cold day. In riding through the creeks the water would splash over our shoes, freezing them to the stirrups; so that, before our feet could be disengaged, a carbine or stone had to be used to break the ice. We were unsuccessful in finding any of the fugitives while returning, although every place where there was a probability of there being, was carefully approached and searched. We arrived that night (Sunday) in camp about 8 o'clock; this, the second expedition, having lasted six days.

I cannot close this report without bearing testimony to the splendid manner in which the men under my command acted during the time we served together. No hardship was too great for them to endure; no command that I gave but was obeyed cheerfully. All of which is respectfully submitted.

I have the honor to remain, Lieutenant, very respectfully, your obedient servant, Oscar Davis,

REPORT OF ASSISTANT SURGEON A. M. VANCE, ON BREATHITT EXPEDITION, 1878-'79.

Louisville, Ky., March 7th, 1879.

Adjutant General J. M. Wright:

Doc. No. 1.]

Sir: I have the honor to report: On January 17th I received my commission as Assistant Surgeon First Battalion, Louisville Legion, K. S. G., and, in accordance with Special Order No. 4, I reported to Capt. E. H. Taylor, commanding troops in Breathitt county, and took charge of all duties connected with that office.

The troops during the whole expedition enjoyed remarkable health, there being but one case of severe illness (that of private Pulliam, S. G.) up to January 25th, when, after a night of severe guard duty, all the men on guard were complaining. On examination, I found they were suffering from a kind of bilious fever, which was relieved in all cases by large doses of quinine. The cause of this trouble, upon investigation, was found in the guard-room, which adjoined the pit or dungeon, under the apartment occupied by the prisoners, into which was thrown all excrementitious matter from the fifteen prisoners. This filth produced the foulest miasma about the whole building.

After making very free ventilation and removing filth, I had no more sickness. All the prisoners were made sick from the same cause. I treated them, furnishing all medicines.

I received all medicines used from Lieut, Swigert, who promptly furnished anything needed in my department.

In view of expeditions of a similar character, I would respectfully offer the following suggestions before closing this report:

First. That the Surgeon be furnished a full assortment of medicines, and all instruments and other surgical appliances that could possibly be needed.

Second. That, whenever practicable, fresh meat should be furnished instead of bacon, and vegetables whenever obtainable.

Third. That the use of tents would be much more conducive to the health of the troops than the chance and insufficient accommodations they may find in houses.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

AP. M. VANCE, Assistant Surgeon Ky. S. G.

To Adjutant General J. M. WRIGHT, Frankfort, Ky.

HEAD-QUARTERS LOUISVILLE LEGION, FIRST BATTALION K. S. G., June 2, 1879.

Right Rev. Bishop T. U. Dudley, Louisville:

82

REV. SIR: I have the pleasure to hand you a resolution of the members of the "Louisville Legion," asking you to accept the position of Chaplain.

I beg leave to call attention to the fact that the membership of the Legion represents every shade of religious opinion, yet this resolution has had the unanimous indorsement of every Company. This evinces a degree of respect for you personally, which justifies the opinion that your occasional presence at the Armory will be productive of good influence.

It is proper that we should explain that no sort of military duty, not even the appearance of military duty, is expected of you.

I remain, Right Rev. Sir, yours, faithfully,

JOHN B. CASTLEMAN, Major Commanding "Louisville Legion."

LOUISVILLE, KY., June 12.

Major J. B. Castleman, Commanding Louisville Legion, K. S. G.:

MAJOR: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your very kind letter of the 2d inst., accompanying resolution adopted by the several Companies of your command, requesting that I shall become their Chaplain. Of course I cannot but appreciate most highly the compliment from so large a body of our young men, representing, as you say, "every shade of religious opinion," and explained, as the request is, by your letter, in which you tell me that "no sort of military duty, not even the appearance of military duty, is expected," I accept the position, and will do all in my power to aid in the development of the excellence of your Legion. I beg that you will assure your command of my high appreciation of the honor they have done me. On my return to Kentucky, I shall have the pleasure to make my acknowledgments in person. Tell the Companies, if they are sent to war, which God forbid, I will go with them.

Very respectfully, yours,

T. U. DUDLEY, Assistant Bishop of Kentucky.
